The Challenge

Given the number of customers, geographic distances and rapidly changing catalogue, Demesne encountered a number of business challenges.

Without a digital presence, customers could only place orders during office hours.

Order processing took place exclusively by phone, leading to increased pressures on staff.

Instead of having a system whereby customers could view pricing and stock levels via an online portal, Demesne customers could only check stock levels by communicating with a member of the Demesne team over phone or email.
